

Finding Needs Paddy to Plate

In Southeast Asia, it takes many different people with different jobs to get rice ready to eat. Here's a look at the process.

Rice seeds are planted in flooded plains called paddies.

Rice roots absorb nutrients in the water. It takes about 3-6 months to grow.

Before rice is ready to be eaten, the grain must be separated from the seed hull.

At harvest time, the paddies must be completely drained and dried before the rice is picked.

It can take many different people with different jobs to tell people about Jesus.
